RECORD OF SERVICE

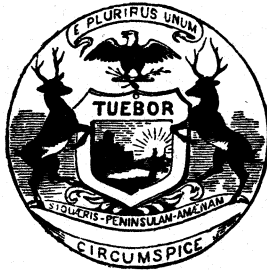

OF

Michigan Volunteers

IN THE

CIVIL WAR

1861-1865

Published by authority of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Michigan Legislature, under the direction of Brig. Gen. Geo. H. Brown, Adjutant General.

In presenting this work to the public, we wish to acknowledge the painstaking, enthusiastic, and able efforts of Assistant Adjutant General, Col. George H. Turner, who, by long and most honorable military service, was especially fitted for the work of compiling this volume. To him is due our unbounded gratitude, and the full honor of these carefully prepared records.

INTRODUCTORY.

The compilation of the military history of each soldier of the Civil War (who was a resident of the State of Michigan at the time he enlisted), for publication and distribution has been the subject of controversy for years. The magnitude of such a work, together with the cost of publication, the exhaustive research required and the amount of clerical services necessary in its compilation, have been large factors in postponing, from time to time, the consideration of the subject.

To comply as far as possible with this demand an admirable history was prepared by Adjutant General John Robertson, a few years ago, entitled "Michigan in the War," and gratuitously distributed through the generosity of the state to the surviving soldiers of the war and to the families of those who perished. But this work was general in character, referring mostly to regimental organizations, and contained the military biography of commissioned officers only.

The enlisted men of the army who endured the hardships and suffered the perils of war considered it due themselves and their children that their names should appear of record in the archives of their country and their services noted, that future generations might know the honorable part their ancestors bore in the memorable conflict known as the Civil War. Such a record will ever be a source of patriotic pride to the soldier who did his duty, whether he served in the ranks or in command of division or corps, and an inspiration to the youth of the country who must in the future assume the civic and military responsibilities of this grand republic.

At the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Michigan, held at Pontiac, June 11 and 12, 1902, the following resolution was passed unanimously:

"Resolved: That the Department of Michigan, Grand Army of the Republic, in encampment assembled, hereby request of the legislature and the Governor of Michigan that immediate provision be made for the publication of the record of the officers and enlisted men who served from this state during the Civil War, in form substantially the same as those published by other states, notably, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Ohio."

The Department Commander appointed a committee on legislation consisting of C. E. Foote, Kalamazoo, Col. Fred Schneider, Lansing, and Alfred Milnes, Coldwater. This committee drafted the following bill, which was passed by both houses of the legislature in the session of 1903, and was promptly signed by Governor Bliss.

The act is known as Act 147, Public Acts of 1903.

The first three sections of the Act are as follows, and the concluding sections refer to provisions of contracting for publication and auditing accounts.

The People of the State of Michigan enact:

Section 1. The Adjutant General shall, as soon as practicable after the passage of this act, prepare for publication an alphabetical regimental history of all soldiers and sailors who enlisted from and were credited to this state during the war of the rebellion. Such history shall contain the name, residence, date of enlistment, date of muster in, rank, promotion, wounds received, capture and imprisonment by the enemy, date of discharge, muster out or death, and such information as can be obtained from the records of this state, the war, navy and other departments of the Federal Government, or other authentic sources, as will correct or complete the records, making as far as practicable a complete and concise military history of each soldier or sailor so serving; prefacing each volume of such records appropriately, with a concise general history of the organization therein named. He shall direct the preparation and compilation of such records for publication in forty-three, forty-four, forty-five, or forty-six volumes, assigning as far as practicable one volume to each of the following organizations and groups of organizations, viz.: One volume to each regimental infantry organization and reorganization, numbered from First to Thirtieth regiment; one volume each to First regiment of Michigan Engineers and Mechanics, First regiment Michigan Sharpshooters, and First regiment Michigan colored troops; one volume to the fourteen Michigan Batteries of Light Artillery; one volume to Gen. George A. Custer's Cavalry Brigade, consisting of the First, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh regiments of Michigan cavalry; one volume to each of the Second, Third, Fourth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Michigan cavalry regiments; and one volume to contain all other miscellaneous organizations and detachments enlisted in this state and serving in Michigan and other state organizations; and one volume to contain a general alphabetical index of all names mentioned in the different volumes constituting the entire edition, showing in what organization or volume each name in the index may be found, for the convenient reference of the public, in library sets, which index volume is herewith limited to two hundred copies. For this purpose the Adjutant General is authorized to employ such extra clerical assistance and procure such blanks and stationery as may be necessary in the preparation, compilation, comparing and proof reading, necessary to secure historical and typographical accuracy.

Section 2. The distribution of said volumes when published shall be made under the supervision of the Adjutant General, in the same general manner now adopted for the distribution of "Michigan in the War," under section three, act two hundred forty-eight, public acts of eighteen hundred eighty-seven. One regimental volume to the applicant of the organization in which he served as follows: Any person who served in any Michigan regiment, battery, company or detachment during the Civil War, and has been honorably discharged, or any person who served in any regiment, battery or company from any other state, or in the regular army, or in the navy, properly accredited to the State of Michigan, and has been honorably discharged, or if such person be dead, then his widow, if living, or if she be dead, then his father, if living; if he be dead, then the mother of any such person, or if she be dead, then to his eldest child, if any there be; and any such person who is still in the service, shall be entitled to receive one copy of said work, on application and identification to the Adjutant General, and if the application for such copy be not made in person by depositing with the Adjutant General necessary postage to cover the expense of sending such book. Also complete sets to adjutants general of other states, and to state and United States public libraries, upon application, and to such other libraries in this state as the Governor may approve, and may be purchased by any other persons who may apply at cost of publication.

Section 8. So soon as the work of preparation and compilation of the historical records herein provided for shall have progressed sufficiently near completion to enable printers and binders to make accurate estimates of the cost of publication, the Adjutant General shall serve a written notification of that fact on the Board of State Auditors; upon such notification, at the earliest practicable moment, the Board of State Auditors is hereby directed to solicit sealed bids for the publication, printing and binding of forty-five thousand volumes of "A Record of Michigan Soldiers and Sailors in the War of the Rebellion, Eighteen Hundred Sixty-one to Eighteen Hundred Sixty-five," and give public notice of the time and place for receiving such bids and the requirements of the contract in accordance with this act by publishing the same in such paper or papers, and for such a period as will in the judgment of the board bring the subject to the attention of the several prominent publishing houses in this state: Provided, That the cost of such work complete shall not exceed fourteen thousand dollars for the printing, binding and delivery of the entire edition herein provided for; and the standard of excellence in quality of material, style of binding, typography and style of printing shall be equal to that used by the state of Massachusetts in its recent publication of "Massachusetts' Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolutionary War," copies of which are now on file in the Adjutant General's office of this state: Provided, further, That the apportionment of the copies of the different regimental volumes of the edition of forty-five thousand volumes herein provided for, shall be in the same relative proportion as the total enrollment of the organizations represented in any single volume bears to the total enrollment of the entire edition as provided for in this act; for which purpose the Adjutant General shall direct the preparation of, and furnish the Board of State Auditors with a comprehensive table of data, showing the total enrollment of the organization, and the total number of printed pages intended for each volume, and the apportionment of the total number of copies to each of such volumes, for the guidance of bidders for the contract of publishing such work.

Immediately upon the approval of the act by the Governor, the Adjutant General commenced active preparations to compile the work as provided for in the bill. No state has been more generous than Michigan in trying to secure full and complete historical military data of her sons, who patriotically volunteered to defend the integrity of their country, and probably the records in the military department are as accurate and complete as any like records of any state in the Union. Yet with all the care and research that has been made, there are individual histories that are deficient in some particulars, owing to the fact that the returns from which they were copied were written in the field during active and protracted campaigns, when great battles were fought, and the movement of troops continued incessantly night and day, circumstances incompatible with accuracy, completeness and legibility, and by officers who succeeded suddenly in command by the death of their predecessors. The greater number who possessed the information desired have been removed by death, and their silent lips can never complete the unwritten history of their comrades.

It was sometimes impossible in the stirring times of war for commanding officers to give authentic and final history of men who disappeared in a great battle, as in many cases the bodies of the dead could not be found, and if possession of the field was yielded to the enemy the fate of those who were made prisoners of war could only, if ever, be learned through unreliable Confederate sources.

For such heroes who died for their country and who sleep in nameless graves their epitaph is inscribed in this history as "Missing in action." A more honorable or heroic epitaph could not be penned. Thousands of the Union dead have been removed by the Government from the field where they fell, and their bodies have been placed in national cemeteries, beautified and adorned, as the mausoleum of the nation's defenders, with appropriate monuments at their resting places.

In order to complete some of the records of the Adjutant General's Office, which is the custodian of all the field returns of the Civil War, Governor Bliss made a request of the Secretary of War, seconded by Senators Burrows and Alger, asking that the incomplete, individual records of this office be completed, upon presentation by the Adjutant General, provided the War Department was in possession of the facts desired. For reasons which seemed sufficient to the Secretary of War, the request was denied.

To supplement the records of this office so as to make each individual history complete as far as possible, blanks were prepared and sent to all the Grand Army Posts of the state, with the request that the names of all Michigan soldiers in the Post and vicinity be returned to the Adjutant General, stating the residence, if living; and, if dead, the date of death and place of burial.

Three hundred out of the three hundred and sixty Posts of the state responded, and the data gathered from these reports have been added to the official history shown by the records of this office. Without doubt there are some inaccuracies in these reports, but the majority of them are correct and will enable many ex-soldiers to locate their comrades, if living, and to know their resting places, if dead.

A request was also made of each superintendent of the eighty national cemeteries to forward to the Adjutant General the names of all Michigan soldiers buried in such cemeteries. A gratifying response was received, and these reports have been carefully compiled and added to the history of the soldier. These reports of the superintendents of national cemeteries tell a mournful story. The superintendent of the National Cemetery at Andersonville, Ga., reports the names of six hundred and forty-seven Michigan soldiers buried there, victims of Andersonville prison. There is scarcely a national cemetery in the United States that does not contain the bodies of Michigan soldiers, and a number of them as many as the cemetery at Andersonville, Ga.

Near the close of the war there were many recruits at depots awaiting transportation to join regiments at the front, but when it was found their services would not be needed, many returned home without the formality of a muster out, and their final disposition was incomplete, and in many such cases shows "no further record."

In the compilation of this work no pains have been spared and no research of the almost numberless field returns made forty years ago, has seemed too arduous to make the soldiers' record absolutely complete if there were material existing to make this possible. That inaccuracies will appear is unavoidable from the nature of the work. The inaccuracies are not the result of careless clerical work in the Adjutant General's office, but are due to the hasty compilation of returns in the field, where names were misspelled and where the name of a soldier is spelled differently in the muster-in and muster-out rolls.

In cases where the name could not be verified as the correct one both are published. When inaccuracies appear in the record, if the soldier will send his discharge papers to the Adjutant General, the corrections will be made in the official records of the office and the discharge papers promptly returned. It scarcely occurred to the officers who made their official returns to the different departments that forty years after the conflict, an individual history of each soldier who participated would be written. Had such been known then, the meagre and scant accounts of skirmishes, battles and sieges—many of them destined to be of world-wide fame—would have been extended and written out fully, giving a comprehensive history of individuals, companies and regiments, a history that would be a priceless heritage today and to future generations.

The hardships of a campaign, the duties exacted night and day, the constant attention to matters of vital importance, are not conducive to literary efforts of biography or general history. It is pathetic to know that thousands upon thousands of Union soldiers who participated in many of the most desperate battles of the Civil War, have no records of such battles to their credit in the official reports. A limited number were fortunate enough to have their names recorded by their officers as participating in such engagements.

Whenever the official records have mentioned the battles in which the soldier fought, or wounds that he received, or promotions made, or any gallant and meritorious service, such record has been carefully noted and attached to the soldier's history. At the commencement of the work it was found that many soldiers saw service in more than one regiment, and as the appropriation contemplated but one volume to each man, the entire history of the soldier has been compiled under his name and placed in the volume where he served longest. The primary object of the whole work has been to group the comrades who served in the same regiment, with names arranged in alphabetical order, and present him with the volume containing his own military history and the history of those with whom he served.

The soldiers who enlisted for three years and after serving two years re-enlisted in the field for "three years or during the war," have the distinctive and honorable title of "veteran" placed after their names.

Careful enumeration has been made of the total enrollment of each regiment, together with the list of casualties.

The work of compiling these individual histories has been long and arduous, but it has been one of gratification and satisfaction to record the gallant deeds of Michigan men who contributed so gloriously to the unity and perpetuity of the Union.

First Michigan Sharpshooters.

The regiment designated as the First Michigan Sharpshooters was organized under the direction of Colonel Charles V. DeLand of Jackson, who was a Captain in the Ninth Infantry in 1861.

The organization was commenced at Kalamazoo in 1862, but the final completion was at Dearborn. Six companies were recruited and mustered into the United States service in July, 1863, and the other four companies were organized subsequently.

The field, staff and line officers at organization were as follows:

Colonel, Charles V. DeLand, Jackson. Lieutenant Colonel, William H. H. Beadle, Ann Arbor. Major, John Piper, Battle Creek. Surgeon, Arvin T. Whelan, Hillsdale. Assistant Surgeon, George L. Cornell, St. Clair. Second Assistant Surgeon, Jacob McNett, Grand Haven. Adjutant, Edward J. Buckbee, Ypsilanti. Quartermaster, David G. Palmer, Jackson. Chaplain, David A. Heagle, Detroit.

The companies comprising the regiment were:

A. Captain, Levant C. Rhines, Battle Creek. First Lieutenant, George C. Knight, Battle Creek. Second Lieutenant, Guy Newbre, Emmet.

B. Captain, Elmer C. Dicey, Grand Haven. First Lieutenant, William Clark, Hillsdale. Second Lieutenant, Francis Whipple, Hillsdale.

C. Captain, Lucien Meigs, Reading. First Lieutenant, Thomas R. Fowler, Jonesville. Second Lieutenant, Albert P. Thomas, Allen.

D. Captain, George N. Davis, Albion. First Lieutenant, Samuel E. Hudson, Ypsilanti. Second Lieutenant, Cyrenus B. Knight, Newton.

E. Captain, Asahel W. Nichols, Lansing. First Lieutenant, Ira L. Evans, Niles. Second Lieutenant, Henry V. Hinckley, Lansing.

F. Captain, Hooker A. DeLand, Jackson. First Lieutenant, Joseph O. Bellair, Detroit. Second Lieutenant, Martin Wager, Battle Creek.

G. Captain, Thomas H. Gaffney, Niles. First Lieutenant, Moses A. Powell, Niles. Second Lieutenant, Charles G. Conn, Elkhart, Ind.

H. Captain, Andrew J. Hall, Coldwater. First Lieutenant, George Fowler, Fowlerville. Second Lieutenant, William Ruddock, Kimball.

I. Captain, George H. Murdoch, Berrien Springs. First Lieutenant, Robert F. Hill, Kalamazoo. Second Lieutenant, William H. Randall, Pittsfield.

K. Captain, Edwin V. Andress, Chesaning. First Lieutenant, William J. Driggs, East Saginaw. Second Lieutenant, Garrett A. Graveraet, Little Traverse.

In July, 1863, the confederate raider, John Morgan, marched through the state of Indiana and Colonel DeLand with the six companies already organized was directed to proceed to Indianapolis, Ind., to intercept Morgan at some point in the state, which the Colonel did by saving the town of North Vernon from being looted by the followers of Morgan. The sharpshooters had several skirmishes with the confederates and obliged them to "move forward" into the state of Ohio, where General Morgan and the remnant of his band were captured.

After this service in the field the six companies returned to Dearborn, where the organization of ten companies was completed and the regiment on the 16th of August was ordered to Chicago to guard confederate prisoners confined at Camp Douglas.

On March 17, 1864, the regiment left Chicago under orders to proceed to Annapolis, Md., where upon arrival it was assigned to the Second Brigade, Third Division, Ninth Corps. The division was commanded by General Orlando B. Willcox and the corps by General Burnside.

The regiment proceeded in April to join the Army of the Potomac and crossed the Rapidan river May 5th and was engaged the two following days in the desperate struggle of the Wilderness. Here the regiment sustained its first losses in killed and wounded, which were severe, but its subsequent engagements were destined to be more bloody. Fighting nearly continuously in the dense cedars of the Wilderness for two days, it then moved with its corps to Spottsylvania, where it was engaged the 9th, 10th and 12th of May. The Third Division had the advance in the march to Spottsylvania and experienced some very severe fighting, but pushed forward and with the Ninth Corps crossed the Po river and took position on high ground southwest of the river.

General Lee made a most determined attack upon the corps, which was isolated and with an almost impassible river behind it, but by superhuman exertions the Second Corps was brought within supporting distance. Then followed one of the most stubborn battles of the war, charges and counter charges alternately giving ground to Union and confederate troops. The battle lasted from daylight until darkness and the struggle was a mortal one between two giants.

The First Sharpshooters stood upon a little rise of ground near the left of the line, their rifles commanding the fields on either side, pouring their murderous fire into the ranks of the advancing foe. Their unerring aim wrought havoc in the confederate lines and dotted the ground with confederate gray. The conflict did not cease until the darkness of night enveloped both friend and foe. During this contest the regiment lost 34 killed, 117 wounded and four missing. Colonel DeLand was struck twice by flying missiles and Major Piper was killed.

The North Anna was crossed May 23d, where severe skirmishing took place with loss to the regiment, and the continuous movement of the sharpshooters during the month of May brought them in daily contact with the enemy.

The regiment was at Cold Harbor June 4 and marched with the army to James river, which it crossed the night of the 15th, and arrived before Petersburg the next day.

The regiment was on the extreme left of the corps, and the enemy assaulted almost immediately after the position was chosen. Two charges were repulsed and the sharpshooters took two confederate officers and 86 men prisoners and captured the colors of the Thirty-fifth North Carolina Infantry. The regiment was nearly surrounded in the engagement and in an attempt to cut its way out, Major Rhines, who was in command of the regiment, was killed, together with 31 men; 46 were wounded and 84 missing.

Colonel DeLand, who had partially recovered from his wounds, took command of the regiment after the death of Major Rhines and the sharpshooters again lead their brigade in a charge on the enemy's entrenchments July 30 and carried the works, taking 50 prisoners. Three men were killed in this charge and Colonel DeLand and 12 men were wounded.

The regiment was constantly under fire during the siege of Petersburg and took part in many of the desperate and bloody assaults upon the confederate forts and entrenchments.

August 19th it was engaged at Weldon railroad and on the 25th at Reams' Station.

Sept. 30th it fought in the battle of Poplar Spring Church, with a loss of several killed and wounded. Colonel DeLand and Captain Bellair were wounded and left on the field and fell in the hands of the enemy.

The regiment led the advance in command of Captain Murdock in a charge upon the enemy's works at Pegram Farm, where its steadiness and well directed volleys drove back the confederate forces that were about to overwhelm the Union lines as they retired from the charge. The regiment was again in the battle of Pegram's Farm Oct. 2 and at Boydton Plank Road Oct. 8.

The regiment, in command of Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Nichols, on April 2, 1865, made a desperate and daring charge upon the confederate works and actually succeeded in getting and holding them for a distance of its regimental front for an hour under a terrific fire of musketry and artillery.

On the morning of April 3d the regiment, in command of Major E. J. Buckbee, Lieutenant Colonel Nichols being wounded, advanced about 4 a. m. and, not finding the enemy in his works, pushed on and gained the enviable notoriety of being the first regiment of the Union army to march into the city of Petersburg.

The brigade, commanded by Colonel Ralph Ely of the Eighth Infantry, was composed of the First Sharpshooters, the Second and Twentieth Michigan Infantry.

The mayor of Petersburg surrendered the city to Colonel Ely and the flag of the First Sharpshooters was raised upon the court house, the first Union colors to float over the city, and the Second Michigan colors in a few minutes afterward floated over the custom house.

After the surrender of General Lee the regiment, with its division, proceeded to Alexandria and participated in the grand review at Washington, D. C., May 23.

The regiment arrived in Jackson July 31 and was paid and disbanded Aug. 7, 1865.

Engagements: North Vernon, Ind., July 13, 1863; Pierceville, Ind., July 14, 1863; Wilderness, Va., May 5, 6, 7, 1864; Ny river, Va., May 9, 1864; Po river, Va., May 10, 1864; Spottsylvania, Va., May 12, 13, 18, 1864; Oxford, Va., May 23, 1864; North Anna, Va., May 24, 25, 1864; Tolo-potomy, Va., May 29, 1864; Bethesda Church, Va., June 2, 3, 1864; Cold Harbor, Va., June 7, 1864; Petersburg, Va., June 17, 18, 1864; The Crater, Va., July 30, 1864; Weldon Railroad Va., Aug. 19, 21, 1864; Reams' Station, Va., Aug. 25, 1864; Poplar Spring Church, Va., Sept. 30, 1864; Pegram Farm, Va., Oct. 2, 1864; Boydton Road, Va., Oct. 8, 1864; Hatch-er's Run, Va., Oct. 27, 28, 1864; Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865; Fort McGilvery, Va., April 1, 1865; capture of Petersburg, Va., April 3, 1865; siege of Petersburg, Va., from June 17, 1864, to April 3, 1865.

Berdan's First and Second U. S. Sharpshooters.

Berdan's First and Second U. S. Sharpshooters.

It was during the summer of 1861 that this organization was commenced, on the proposition of Hiram Berdan of New York, and which was to be composed of companies of picked men from the loyal states. The purpose being to bring together the best marksmen possible of the North and to arm them with the most reliable rifle made. With such men so armed and thoroughly equipped, it was believed that in the line of special service—that of sharpshooting and skirmishing—they would become invaluable to the Union cause.

The proposal of Colonel Berdan having been accepted by the government, printed circulars were issued by the adjutant generals of different states calling for companies of sharpshooters, and setting forth the terms on which candidates for admission would be accepted, and wherein it was ordered that: "No man be accepted who cannot, at 200 yards, put ten consecutive shots in a target, the average distance not to exceed five inches from the center of the bullseye." Or, in other words, the string measurement of the ten shots should not exceed fifty inches. Each man was allowed to choose his own rifle, but must justify his selection by the performance of the weapon in his own hands; and for each rifle furnished and accepted, $60 was to be paid therefor, thus insuring the best arms that could be purchased. Many, however, did not avail themselves of this offer, preferring to let the government furnish them.

Berdan's proposition was accepted by the Secretary of War, June 15, 1861, as follows:

The regiment within named is accepted, in accordance with the within proposal, provided the said regiment shall be mustered into service within ninety days of this date. The first detachment to be mustered in within twenty days, and so one detachment after another, as the War Department may order. And provided, also, that said regiment shall come into service armed and equipped without expense to the government.

(Signed.)

SIMON CAMERON,
Secretary of War.

The project received the following recommendation from General Winfield Scott:

Headquarters of the Army,
Washington, D. C., June 14, 1861.

H. Berdan, Esq.:

Dear Sir:—The General-in-Chief, under the reference to him of the subject of Sharpshooters, by His Excellency, the President, and Hon. Secretary of War, as set forth in your letter of June 13th, 1861, desires me to say he was very favorably impressed with you personally; that a regiment of such Sharpshooters as are proposed by you, and instructed according to your system, would be of great value, and could be advantageously employed by him in the public service.

Respectfully yours,

SCHUYLER HAMILTON,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Military Secretary.

In all the test shooting required before admission there was naturally some fine marksmanship developed, and among the best was that of Charles H. Townsend, at Camp Randall, Wis., who fired five shots at 200 yards with a total measurement of three and three-quarter inches; while, on the target grounds of the different states, two inches to a shot was frequently the average. But it was not always an easy matter to come up to the standard, and many, failing, were thrown out.

The rendezvous was established at Weehawken, opposite New York City, to which place most of the companies were at first ordered, but on or about the 24th of September proceeded to Washington, where they went into camp of instruction. With the required number of companies arriving at the Washington camp during the fall and winter, the First Regiment was completed with over 1,000 men, representing five states, as follows:

A, New York; B, New York; C, Michigan; D, New York; E, New Hampshire; F, Vermont; G, Wisconsin; H, New York; I, Michigan; K, Michigan.

The Second Regiment, Colonel Post commanding, came in later, encamped next to the First, and consisted of eight companies representing the following states:

A, Minnesota; B, Michigan; C, Pennsylvania; D, Maine; E, Vermont; F, New Hampshire; G, New Hampshire; H, Vermont.

Their uniform was of fine material, consisting of dark green coat and cap, with black plume, light blue trousers (afterward exchanged for green ones) and leather leggins, presenting a striking contrast to the regular blue of the infantry. The knapsack was of hair-covered calfskin, with cooking kit attached, considered the best in use, as it was the handsomest, most durable and complete. By their dress were they known far and wide, and the appellation of "Green Coats" was soon acquired. When fully uniformed and equipped, the Sharpshooters made a very handsome appearance, more so, upon the whole, than many others.

The camp of instruction was organized for the purpose of drilling and disciplining the vast army of raw volunteers, to mould the citizen into the soldier. The formation of this camp was intrusted to General McClellan, who was called to the general command from the field of his victories in Western Virginia, which in two months' time made West Virginia a loyal state.

The time was occupied in camp in target practice, learning the company drill and battalion movements, guard, patrol, and camp duties; and, under the instruction of Lieutenant Mears, U. S. A., lieutenant-colonel of the regiment, they were soon able to execute the most difficult regimental drills, and were probably unexcelled therein by any other regiment, particularly in skirmishing, a service they were destined to perform at the front, in all the great battles of the Army of the Potomac up to the time of their expiration of service.

In the target practice, a matter of the greatest importance, many excellent scores were made, and under the supervision of Colonel Berdan great improvement was made in their marksmanship; the colonel himself a noted sharpshooter, putting himself to the test on many occasions, before multitudes of people. One of his targets was erected at a distance of 600 yards, in which he frequently put five consecutive shots within the ten inch ring, using the telescope rifle. These telescopes were powerful magnifiers, so much so that a small object, not distinguishable to the naked eye, could be seen at a long distance. But the cross-wires within tremble so easily, that it requires a steady hand to hold the cross on the mark, from the shoulder in off-hand shooting. However, as the telescopic rifles used by the Sharpshooters were generally very heavy—from fifteen to thirty pounds—they were mostly shot from a rest; in fact, were generally used for long-range shooting. But two companies of the regiment—C, of Michigan, and E, of New Hampshire—were fully armed, having target rifles of different descriptions. The Vermont company also had a few guns. The balance of the regiment were unarmed and waiting for the Sharps improved rifle, military pattern, which had been promised. This was their choice of all the many kinds presented, manufacturers of all sorts of new guns constantly offering the same for trial and acceptance. Besides this, the chief of the ordnance department was very anxious to have the regiment armed with the muzzle-loading Springfield, then the established arm of the United States Infantry. As soon as the government recognized the corps officially by mustering the First Regiment into service, Colonel Berdan made a requisition for Sharps breech-loading rifles, which proved to be, according to Berdan, "a declaration of war." The newspapers of that date contained, almost daily, statements of what General Ripley, chief of ordnance, had to say, or General Scott, or the Assistant Secretary of War, Thomas Scott, and Berdan had to fight the whole of them. They took the ground that there was no rifle equal to the Springfield for a soldier, except General Ripley, who went so far as to say that he preferred the old smooth bore with "ball and buck." General Scott, in his indorsement on the colonel's application, said: "Breech-loaders would spoil his command." The old veteran didn't live long enough to find out his mistake—to learn of the great revolution going on in this method of improving guns, so soon to be demonstrated by the Sharpshooters after getting into the field.

In consequence of this attempt to turn the Sharpshooters from their original purpose, and force on them the army musket, it was uncertain for a time whether the chosen breech-loaders would be furnished. But through the persistent efforts of Colonel Berdan, an order was finally issued for their manufacture. The open-sighted Sharps rifle, using linen or "skin" cartridges, 52 calibre, conical ball, was the best breech-loading gun at that time made, a perfectly safe and reliable arm, combining accuracy with rapidity, just what a skirmish line needed for effective work. To their good judgment in choosing this rifle may be attributed their future success in the field, attaining as they did a reputation that eventually made the name of "Berdan Sharpshooters" renowned in foreign lands as well as our own. The muzzle-loading target rifles—telescope and globe sights—while of great value before fortifications and for special work, would have been useless in skirmishing.

President Lincoln as a Rifle Shot.

During the splendid weather of the autumn months, visitors to the great camp of instruction, with which the city of Washington was environed, came in untold numbers; they were constantly crowding in, not only from our own mighty North, but from all civilized quarters of the world. And not the least of the many objects of interest to be noted was that of the rifle practice referred to. The newspapers at the time were full of these target trials, and the shooting of the Sharpshooters furnished items for a long while to the dailies and illustrated journals.

On one occasion the President, with General McClellan, paid a visit to the camp, and were invited by Colonel Berdan to the rifle range, where shooting was going on. To show what the men could do in rifle-pits, a target representing two zouaves painted on canvas, was placed at a distance of 600 yards. One hundred men with their heavy target-rifles, were placed in a pit, where each fired one shot. When the target was brought in, it was found that every shot had struck within the outline of the two figures. President Lincoln fired three shots from a globe rifle belonging to H. J. Peck, of Company F, while General McClellan and some others tried their skill with more or less success. President Lincoln handled the rifle like a veteran marksman, in a highly successful manner, to the great delight of the many soldiers and civilians surrounding. Once, resting his gun on what he called a sapling; he said: "Boys, this reminds me of old-time shooting," when they waved their hats and cheered him.

Michigan Companies in First and Second U. S. or Berdan's Sharpshooters.

These four companies of Berdan's Sharpshooters were so closely identified with the Army of the Potomac from April 1, 1862, to January 1, 1865, that the history of that army is the history of Berdan's Sharpshooters. They were present either by squad, company or regiment at all the important battles and skirmishes during the Peninsular Campaign and from there on to Gettysburg, where they rendered distinguished service, as they did in every subsequent battle of the Army of the Potomac until the close of the war.

Very little has been written about these four companies, and the information obtainable is from the regimental history written by Captain C. A. Stevens of St. Paul, Minnesota, and from James H. Baker and Seymour Foster of Lansing.

Colonel Fox in his "Regimental Losses of the Civil War" speaks of Berdan's Sharpshooters as "the unique regiments of the war," and as the best known of any regiments in the army, and that it would have been difficult to have raised in any one state regiments equal to Berdan's requirements. The class of men selected were also of a high grade in physical qualifications and intelligence. They were continually in demand as skirmishers on account of their wonderful proficiency as such, and they undoubtedly killed more men than any other regiments in the army. In skirmishing they had no equal.

The following order from Headquarters of the Third Division, Second Army Corps, shows how much the services of these four companies of sharpshooters were appreciated:

Headquarters Third Division Second Army Corps.

General Orders—No. 12.

The United States Sharpshooters, including the first and second consolidated battalion, being about to be broken up as a distinct organization, in compliance with orders from the War Department, the Brigadier General commanding the Division will not take leave of them without acknowledging their good and efficient service during three years in the field. The U. S. Sharpshooters leave behind them a glorious record in the Army of the Potomac since the first operation against Yorktown in 1862 up to Hatcher's Run, and few are the battles or engagements in which they did not make their mark. The Brigadier General commanding, who had them under his command during most of the campaigns of 1863 and 1864, would be the last to forget their brave deeds during that period, and he feels assured that the different organizations to which they may belong severally, officers and men, will show themselves worthy of their old reputation. With them the past will answer for the future.

By Command of Brigadier General,

W. K. DRIVER,

A. A. G.

R. DETROBRIAND.

Birge's Western Sharpshooters.

Birge's Western Sharpshooters.

In September, 1861, a company of Sharpshooters was recruited at Battle Creek, Hartford, Lawrence, Keeler, Watervliet, Benton Harbor and St. Joseph by John Piper, Albert S. Gove, Stephen W. Duncombe and Philip C. Dedrick. It offered its services to Major General John C. Fremont, who ordered it to Benton Barracks, St. Louis, where it was assigned to Birge's Sharpshooters and mustered into the service of the United States Sept. 9, 1861, with the following officers:

John Piper, Battle Creek, Captain; Albert S. Gove, Battle Creek, First Lieutenant, and Stephen W. Duncombe, Keeler, Second Lieutenant.

There were also men from Michigan in Companies B, C, D, E, F and H of this regiment, which was under the patronage and special favor of General Fremont, who intended to make of it a model sharpshooting regiment, and one that would represent the whole West. With this view, recruiting officers were appointed in nearly all the Western states, to recruit for Birge's Sharpshooters. Two companies were raised in Ohio, three in Illinois, one in Michigan and three were organized at the barracks from squads sent by recruiting officers from Iowa, Minnesota and other Western states, thus forming a regiment different from any other in this, that it represented every state in the West. Commenced under the most favorable auspices, it would have been, before taking the field, a large and splendidly equipped organization, had not Fremont been superseded in command of the department. His pet scheme of a complete regiment of sharpshooters was partly squelched by General Halleck, who stopped all recruiting for it and hurried it into the field, before it was thoroughly equipped and organized, with but nine companies, which was below the minimum required for a regimental organization. It was armed with the American Deer and Target Rifle. The accoutrements were not of the kind prescribed by army regulations, but consisted of a bullet pouch of bear skin covering and a powder horn or in some cases a flask. In the bullet pouch was a compartment where the soldier carried his screw drivers, bullet moulds and patch cutter, singular implements for a soldier; but Birge's boys moulded their own bullets, greased them and patched them with as much care as an old hunter would, and used them as effectively. It was the design of General Fremont to give them a complete hunter dress, but this was vetoed by Halleck, and the only thing peculiar about the dress was the hat, which was a gray sugar loaf shaped affair, with three squirrel tails running from both back and front and meeting at the apex of the crown in an indescribable knot.

Lieutenant Colonel John M. Birge, of St. Louis, commanded the regiment and on the 12th of December, 1861, marched it from Benton Barracks to take the field in North Missouri. Arriving at Centralia, on the North Missouri railroad, the Colonel found plenty of work for his little command, which he scattered in detachments over the country in search of the enemy, several small bodies of whom were met and defeated, beside being badly frightened at the squirrel tail hats and long range rifles.

On the 28th of December General Prentiss, commanding the district of North Missouri, led four companies of Curtis' Horse and four companies of sharpshooters, company D being one of the four, against the command of Colonel Dorsey, consisting of nearly a thousand mounted and dismounted infantry. General Prentiss's command numbered about 400 men, but so impetuously did they fight that in less than two hours the enemy was routed, "foot, horse and dragoon." This battle was at Mount Zion Church, twenty miles from Sturgeon, and has been known as the battle of Mount Zion. After this battle no fighting of any moment occurred during their stay in North Missouri, which terminated on the fourth of February, 1862, on which day the command was shipped by railroad to St. Louis, where it embarked on a steamer to Fort Henry, arriving on the ninth, just too late to take part in the capture of the fort. Here the regiment was attached to Colonel Lauman's brigade of General C. F. Smith's division and marched with it on the twelfth to a position in front of Fort Donelson. Here the General was a little perplexed to know what to do with a regiment armed with deer rifles and without bayonets and did a terrible lot of swearing because the regiment was armed with that kind of a gun, but finally concluded to let them fight in their own way.

And thus it was that during that memorable siege the "Squirrel Tails" scattered themselves out, behind logs, trees and stumps, in trees and clumps of bushes, along the entire front of Smith's division. Every man kept a sharp lookout for the enemy and with a steady hand they kept a twelve gun battery in front of the division silent for the entire three days of the siege.

Remaining at Fort Donelson after its capture till March 5th, the command marched back again to the Tennessee river and embarked for Pittsburg Landing, where it landed on the eighteenth of the same month. On the 6th and 7th of April it participated in the battles of Shiloh, but, being used only as a skirmishing regiment, its loss was small compared with some other regiments. From the 10th of May to the 30th, in the siege of Corinth, it was kept skirmishing almost constantly and during that time lost a large number of men.

Upon returning to Corinth from the pursuit of the enemy, P. E. Burke took command of the regiment, having been commissioned Colonel, Colonel Birge having been mustered out. It was assigned to the city command as Provost Guard, remaining till the battle of Corinth, on the 3d and 4th of October, where it lost heavily in men and officers. From Corinth, in pursuit of the fleeing enemy, and back to Rienzi, Miss., consumed some weeks, and the 26th of November found the company encamped six miles south of Corinth, where it helped establish a fine stockade camp, called after an old commander, General Davies. While here the regiment which had heretofore belonged to Missouri, was transferred, by order of the Secretary of War, to Illinois. The name Birge's Sharpshooters was dropped entirely and henceforth the regiment was the Sixty-sixth Illinois Volunteers, or Western Sharpshooters. Here the regiment purchased, with their own funds, at a cost of $50 each, the Henry Repeating Rifle. This arm did much to make the regiment famous and the men, who purchased them with their own means, deserve great credit. The regiment remained at this camp till the 12th of November, 1863, when the division—then the Second Division, Sixteenth Army Corps—moved to Pulaski, Tenn. Here, in December, the company re-enlisted, and in January, 1864, were sent to Chicago to be furloughed. After being re-organized as a veteran company and regiment, it returned to Pulaski and on the 29th of April started for Chattanooga, 600 strong, to enter with the grand army upon the Atlantic campaign. Leaving Chattanooga on the 6th of May, the regiment had the honor, on the ninth of the same month, to open the fighting of the Army of the Tennessee in this campaign, at Snake Creek Gap and Resaca, and unaided and almost unsupported captured and held till night the heights in front of that stronghold of Resaca.

From here throughout the whole of that memorable campaign these companies were always in front and participated in not less than ten pitched battles and skirmishes innumerable, company D losing its Captain, two Lieutenants and ten or fifteen men. Never did a regiment perform harder and better service than did this little band of veterans. In the battle of the 22d of July, 1864, before Atlanta, Ga., it had the honor, with others after desperate fighting of recapturing the celebrated De Gress battery of six twelve pounders. The brigade of the Sixteenth Corps assisting in its recapture was the one to which the Western Sharpshooters was attached and belonged to the Sixteenth Corps, but after the Atlanta campaign was attached to the Fifteenth and remained so till the muster out. The brigade, after repulsing the charge on the left, was double-quickened some three miles toward the right at the railroad. The brigade was formed with the Sixty-sixth Illinois Sharpshooters on the right. The Sixty-sixth came up at the battery behind the works. Captain W. S. Boyd, who commanded the regiment during the campaign, inserted the shell in the gun that burst. It was a percussion, not a fuse shell. The breech went 25 or 30 feet to the rear. The right trunnion went to the right over the breastworks, the left over the right wheel. The gun broke forward of the trunnions, turning end for end, the muzzle pointing inward, the shell remaining in the muzzle. It was said that it was a miracle that some one was not killed or crippled by it. Just after this some of De Gress's men put in an appearance and one of them told the Captain that the gun had formerly been used with reduced charges on account of a flaw having been discovered in the piece.

The division to which the regiment belonged, being attached to the Fifteenth Corps, marched with it on the ever-to-be-remembered campaigns of Georgia and South Carolina. On the Ogeechee river, near Savannah, the regiment being thrown in front, on the 9th of December, 1864, captured the enemy's works protecting the Gulf railroad, with a fine Blakely gun. At Savannah it was awarded the post of honor, being quartered in the old United States Barracks and used for special duty. Its last engagement was at Bentonville, North Carolina, the 21st of March, 1865. During its three years and ten months' service the regiment marched about 5,000 miles, fought in sixteen pitched battles and lost as many men, killed and wounded, as it had when mustered out of service July 7, 1865.

The above history was furnished by Ren Barker, formerly Sergeant in Company D.
