Kellogg Community College academic advisors identified at risk students and set up a support system to help students succeed. Academic advisors reviewed COMPASS, ASSET, and ACT placement assessment scores in English, reading, and mathematics with students during the intake interview. Sometimes academic advisors needed to advise students to commit a semester to academic skills building in the developmental program before beginning college-level work or to take a combination of development courses along with college-level courses. Educational plans are prepared for at risk students so they could see the courses needed to meet their career and academic goals.

Also supported was our "First Steps For Classroom Success" program. Last year, attendance averaged topped over 190 persons (compared to previous years' average attendance of 100) in one of four-hour workshop sessions. Consistently, our data reveal that attendees of "First Steps" had better retention rates and achieved nearly a half a grade higher in their first semester g.p.a. Also, self-reported satisfaction surveys showed that over 90% of the participants felt better prepared for the first day of college.

3. Summary of Accomplishments (Limit of 10 lines)
 The Developmental Studies Department has conducted several studies to assess the success of its students in both developmental and non-developmental courses. Research shows that developmental writing students are succeeding in the next composition course at rates comparable to non-developmental students. The same is true for elementary algebra students who take intermediate algebra. On the other hand, data has confirmed instructor observation about the need for a pre-algebra course. In fall '09, students will place into College Arithmetic, Pre-Algebra, or Elementary Algebra at the time of initial assessment testing. The elementary algebra curriculum piloted last year has now been fully implemented. The college added a full-time composition instructor, thus increasing the number of developmental writing courses taught by full-time instructors.

During the 2007/2008 academic year WCCCD continued to upgrade services to at-risk students by increasing the number of student workshops (i.e. test taking workshops, stress management workshops, etc) offered through the Learning Centers as well as offering faculty training workshops that would enable faculty to better assess and serve at-risk students (PLATO workshops, Faculty Organization Day workshops, etc.). These training sessions are in addition to ongoing informational workshops where faculty learn about the resources available to at-risk students. The use of new technology has continued to be refined so that it will better service at-risk students; WCCCD has implemented a preliminary on-line advising program which is currently used by a significant percentage of WCCCD students. This along with online admissions and registration has increased access to WCCCD for all at-risk stude ...
